OBITUARIES

Mary Tebo, Mohawk activist; taught Native American crafts

Mohawk Indian activist Mary Tebo, 85, of Reraquette Point Road, Akwesasne, died May 2 in a Cornwall, Ontario, hospital. She was 85.

Mrs. Tebo, who was also known by the Indian name Wennonsiosta," was born in Kanatakon, Akwesasne. She was a Mohawk traditionalist and nationalist. An activist for sovereignty and jurisdiction of the Mohawk Nation, she was jailed several times in 1960 for refusing to recognize the United States-Canadian border that runs through Akwesasne, the Mohawk nation in Northern New York state. She was the widow of former War Chief John Tebo.

Mrs. Tebo taught basketry in Syracuse in connection with the Indian Education Program of the Syracuse City School District at the North American Indian Club and at the French Fort in Liverpool. She also helped to coordinate the American Indian display at Syracuse's Festival of Nations from 1966 to 1979.

Mrs. Tebo was instrumental in the development of a Mohawk language dictionary, and demonstrated American Indian crafts in Cooperstown, Florida and Gettysburg, Pa., and at the American Indian Museum in New York City. She was a member of the Madison County Historical Association.

Surviving are five daughters, Annabelle Oakes, Cecilia Snyder, Bertha Oakes and Minnie Garrow, all of Akwesasne, and Julia Richmond of Oklahoma; 40 grandchildren, 64 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.
